Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-26 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Simone (US Pat 5,397,786) in view of Weinstein et al. (U.S. Pat. 6,013,290), WO 96/04240, Fang (U.S. Pat. 5, 886,040), Webster's Dictionary (10th Ed.), Odian et al. (Schaum's Outline), Hultman et al. (U.S. Pat. 5,767,159), St. Cyr et al. (U.S. Pat. 6,159,942) and Krotzer et al. (US Pat. App. Pub. 2001/0008641) for the reasons of record set forth in the prior Office Action and the further reasons below.

Simone, Weinstein et al., WO 96/04240, Fang, Webster's Dictionary (10th Ed.), Odian et al., Hultman et al. and St. Cyr et al. were discussed in the prior Office Action and the same are incorporated herein.

Krotzer et al. teaches the use of creatine and phosphorus for body building in which the daily intake amount may be obtained by a single serving or by multiple serving, and that the most preferred serving for phosphorus is 2,690 mg (Paragraphs 0041-0042).

Examiner has duly considered Applicant's arguments but deems them unpersuasive.

In response to applicant's arguments against the references individually, one cannot show nonobviousness by attacking references individually where the rejections are based on combinations of references. See In re Keller, 642 F.2d 413, 208 USPQ 871 (CCPA 1981); In re Merck & Co., 800 F.2d 1091, 231 USPQ 375 (Fed. Cir. 1986). Further, the test for obviousness is not whether the features of a secondary reference may be bodily incorporated into the structure of the primary reference; nor is it that the claimed invention must be expressly suggested in any one or all of the references. Rather, the test is what the combined teachings of the references would have suggested to those of ordinary skill in the art. See In re Keller, 642 F.2d 413, 208 USPQ 871 (CCPA 1981).

Applicant's argue that 2,500 mg is the maximum amount of electrolyte permitted in the Simone beverage. However, as indicated above, the test for obviousness is not whether the features of a secondary reference may be bodily incorporated into the structure of the primary reference. Although Simone discloses the use of up to 2,500 mg, Krotzer discloses that amounts greater than the same are used for use in bodybuilding. Therefore, one of ordinary skill in the art would have been motivated to use greater amounts of phosphorous where bodybuilding in addition to rehydration is desired. Further, Simone and Krotzer are not disparate references. The Simone drink is suitable for use with athletes and Krotzer is suitable for use in the strengthening and toning of body muscles, decreasing an individual's ratio of body fat to muscle, an improvement in the appearance of muscle strength and tone (Krotzer at Pg. 1, paragraph 0009).

Clearly an athlete would be considered with strengthening and toning of body muscles, as such, one of ordinary skill in the art would expect that the Krotzer composition would be suitable for use in athletes.

Applicant argues that one of ordinary skill in the art would not be motivated to selectively modify the rehydration drink of Simone as to increase the phosphorus content per Krotzer. However, the test for obviousness is not whether the features of a secondary reference may be bodily incorporated into the structure of the primary reference; nor is it that the claimed invention must be expressly suggested in any one or all of the references. Rather, the test is what the combined teachings of the references would have suggested to those of ordinary skill in the art. See In re Keller, 208 USPQ 871 (CCPA 1981). Further, Examiner has made no indication that one would have to ignore the other teachings of Krotzer. "The use of patents as references is not limited to what the patentees describe as their own inventions or to the problems with which they are concerned. They are part of the literature of the art, relevant for all they contain." In re Heck, 216 USPQ 1038, 1039 (Fed. Cir. 1983) (quoting In re Lemelson, 3158 USPQ 275, 277 (CCPA 1968)).

Therefore, the claimed invention, as a whole, would have been prima facie obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made, because every element of the invention has been collectively taught by the combined teachings of the references.
